

How 11 Designers Are Making the Most of Outdoor Spaces

Bunny Williams, Ken Fulk, and others have taken to Instagram to share precious alfresco moments

By Timothy Latterner
March 26, 2020

As the coronavirus pandemic continues to develop, people across the country are staying home. Designers too are hunkered down—and while many are spending their time sequestered in their home offices, plenty are also taking advantage of their outdoor spaces and the increasingly mild springtime weather. Below, AD PRO rounds up some of the gardens, patios, and other outdoor refuges that have been shared by the industry’s top talents on Instagram in recent days.

Amy Lau

amylaudesign

Central Park

View Profile

View More on Instagram

633 likes

amylaudesign

A New Day Brings New Hope:
 "No matter how chaotic it is, wildflowers will still spring up from the middle of nowhere" -Sheryl Crow
 From my favorite song as a little girl from growing up in Arizona,
 "The sun will come out Tomorrow, Bet your bottom dollar That Tomorrow there'll be Sun! Sending Love and Light to all of you from our homes and now home offices 🧡 #amylaudesign @amylaudesign 🌻🌻🌻 - Amy

view all 64 comments

Add a comment...

AD100 designer Amy Lau is trying to find the beauty in the everyday. During a walk through Central Park, she took a moment to post a picture of daffodils growing in flower beds, along with her favorite Sheryl Crow lyric, “No matter how chaotic it is, wildflowers will still spring up from the middle of nowhere.”